China's economic success since 1978 has been linked to its rise as a great power. China has been the fastest-growing economy since the reforms first began there. It is projected to overtake the US as the world's largest economy by 2040. After the inception of the People's Republic of China in 1949, following the communist revolution under the leadership of Mao, its economy was based on the Soviet model. The economically backward communist China chose to sever its links with the capitalist world. The economy also grew at a respectable rate of 5-6 percent. But annual growth of 2-3 percent in population meant that economic growth was insufficient to meet the needs of a growing population. China ended its political and economic isolation with the establishment of relations with the United States in 1972.

18. Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follow:

The agricultural situation went from bad to worse in the 1960s. Already, the rate of growth of food grain production in the 1940s and 1950s was barely staying above the rate of population growth. Between 1965 and 1967, severe droughts occurred in many parts of the country. This was also the period when the country faced two wars and a foreign exchange crisis. All this resulted in a severe food shortage and famine-like conditions in many parts of the country. It was in Bihar that the food-crisis was most acutely felt as the state faced a near-famine situation. The food shortage was significant in all districts of Bihar, with 9 districts producing less than half of their normal output. Five of these districts, in fact, produced less than one-third of what they produced normally. Food deprivation subsequently led to acute and widespread malnutrition. It was estimated that the calorie intake dropped from 2200 per capita per day to as low as 1200 in many regions of the state (as against the requirement of 2450 per day for the average person). The death rate in Bihar in 1967 was 34% higher than the number of deaths that occurred in the following year.

- i. When the Indian agricultural situation went from bad to worse?
  - a. 1962
  - b. 1960
  - c. 1965
  - d. 1970
